Course Description:

The subject is framed by the valid directive on doctoral studies. Prior to defending the dissertation, the doctoral student prepares the dissertation independently under the guidance of the supervisor. This is a final work, which usually contains a theoretical introduction that analyzes the current state of knowledge in the field, the characteristics of objectives, a detailed description of the procedures used, results achieved, their evaluation, discussion, conclusion and a list of used literature. The formal arrangement of the thesis respects the requirements set out in the Rector's Directive on the requirements for final theses.

The defense itself is led by the chairman of the commission, who first presents the CV of the doctoral student, announces the topic of the dissertation and asks the supervisor to provide essential information from the supervisor's opinion and mention the doctoral student's outputs. Subsequently, the doctoral student will briefly present the content of his work, its concept, results and benefits. Opponents will immediately present the essential content of their assessments, and then the doctoral student will take a stand on the assessments, comment on objections, comments and questions. A public debate continues, which is open to all present. Emphasis is placed on the accuracy, justification, originality and seriousness of the knowledge contained in the dissertation. The doctoral student will finally comment on all the suggestions and questions from the discussion.
